The Master of Organizational Leadership, an interdisciplinary program, nurtures the necessary skills and abilities for effective leaders. Sustainable success in private and public organizations depends on leaders capable of analyzing complex environments, developing and communicating strategic visions, building a collaborative performance culture, maintaining their integrity and making difficult decisions. We have built a curriculum around these essential leadership requirements. MOL classes include a healthy mix of veteran professionals with years of leadership and management experience and younger students eager to learn, grow and develop into effective leaders and managers. As a result, the classroom experience offers a challenging opportunity for the students and the professors to learn from each other. We engage each other as learning partners who, through an often spirited classroom dialogue, jointly explore the meaning and significance of leadership. In these dialogues, faculty and students find they have much to learn from each other in an enthusiastic exchange of knowledge and experiences.

Developmental Outcomes MOL students can expect to:

- Learn multiple theoretical frameworks to better understand and improve their leadership abilities.
- Master a variety of communication methods needed to influence others and increase organizational participation.
- Increase their degree of competency and self-confidence in taking on leadership roles.
- Deepen their understanding of the ethical dimensions of leading others.
- Improve their skills in identifying, analyzing and correcting dysfunctional relationships that disrupt organizational effectiveness.
- Develop research competencies founded in accepted methodological, philosophical and scientific principles applied to leadership practices.
- Become a more valued contributor at work and in the community as result of their new knowledge and skills.

Immediate Benefit to Organizations Employers sponsoring employees can expect to gain immediate benefits.

- An increasingly skilled employee is capable of greater responsibility and contribution. Most of our students report an improved effectiveness on the job during their studies.
- Major courses in the curriculum engage students directly in problems at their workplace, closing the gap between school and work, theory and practice.

Faculty Deeply rooted in organizational practices, the MOL faculty combine theory and practice in a way that illuminates both. From this deep knowledge and experience, faculty design courses with significant emphasis on learner-centered dialogue inside and outside the classroom. A mix of full-time professors and part-time instructors with significant leadership and management experience are all dedicated to a collaborative, participative learning approach.

Program Structure Typically, students complete the MOL program in a little over two years by taking one course per session for 12 sessions. There are two eight-week sessions in the fall, two eight-week sessions in the spring and one summer session. Through an accelerated format available on the Davenport 54th Street campus, students can complete their degree in as little as 15 months.
